When state legislators start filing for re-election Tuesday, Rep. Sam Wolf, D-Glendale City, won't be among them.

Wolf, an eight-term legislator announced Wednesday that he will not seek re-election and will support Rep. Monroe Flinn, D-Cahokia, for the position.

"It was a hard decision, but the reality was that, after the Supreme Court approved the Republican redistricting map, the numbers just weren't there for me," Wolf said. "It left only about a quarter of my district in Madison County and put about 75 percent of the district in St. Clair County."

"After talking with (Democrats) in St. Clair County, it was apparent I would face opposition in the chance of winning. That's not going to be that good."

"Monroe (Flinn) has represented St. Clair County for many years and I felt his chances of winning were much better than mine."

Monroe is a newcomer to the Granite City area — he worked at Granite City

Steel for many years — and I feel good about leaving the district in his hands."

Flinn also said he felt his chances of winning against opposition in the new district would be better than Wolf's chances.

"Not from a standpoint of qualification, just based on the numbers," Flinn said. "With 75 percent of the district in St.

Clair County, if there is a race in the primary or general election the numbers favor me and not him."

Although the Republican map puts Cahokia, where Flinn lives, in a district represented by Rep. Wyvett Young, D-Glendale City, it can also include another district which includes part of his old district. If elected in the 1992 general election, Flinn would have to move to the new district within six months.

Wolf said Flinn, who is in his 22nd year as a state representative, said he wouldn't run against Wolf. Flinn agreed (See WOLF, Page 2A)

Bellcoff: District is 'torn to shreds'

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

Rep. Sam Wolf's decision not to seek re-election is a blow to voters in Madison County.

According to Madison County Democratic Chairman John Bellcoff, "The loss of an outstanding legislator like Sam Wolf is the kind of thing you had to expect when Illinois State's Gov. Jimmie Cunningham voted to approve the Republican redistricting map," Bellcoff said.

Cunningham, a Democrat from Fairview Heights, joined the court's three Republicans in approving the Republican-drawn redistricting plan on Friday.

Under the Republican plan, the area formerly represented by Wolf is divided among four new districts, with Wolf retaining only a small section of Granite City, Pontoon Beach and Nameoki Township in Madison County.

"They've taken Madison County and torn it to shreds," Bellcoff said. "Already, we've lost a quality representative. Only time will tell how badly the voters here have been hurt by this map."

Bellcoff, who is also mayor of Madison, said he was not surprised by Cunningham's vote.

"The first go-around was to make the Democrats feel happy," he said. "Then it didn't surprise me one bit when (Cunningham) voted that way the second time."

Granite City Mayor Von Dee Cruse said he hoped to head the campaign to get Wolf to run again. But Cruse said the fact that Rep. Monroe Flinn, D-Cahokia, had decided to run made Wolf's decision a little easier to take.

Standoff ends, Eagle Park joins 911 system

By Nicole Vaughn
Staff writer

The stand-off between Eagle Park Fire Protection District Chief Ed Lee Salmond and the Madison County 911 Emergency Telephone System officially came to an end Wednesday.

During the Madison County Board meeting Wednesday morning, the appointment of an Eagle Park man, Charles Rhodes Jr., to the 911 board was announced.

Rhodes replaces Madison County Board member Vasil Eftimoff, D-Glendale City, on the 911 board.

Eftimoff resigned the post several months ago after it was learned that his service on both boards was considered a conflict of interest by the state and in violation of a state statute.

Salmond, who for several months refused to have his fire department participate in 911, recommended Rhodes for the position.

One of Salmond's chief complaints about the 911 system was the lack of information on that board and in county government as a whole.

"This was something I wanted to bring to their (the county's) attention and I accomplished that," Salmond said.

"With representation, you feel a part of it. You're not just paying the utility charge."

Residents have been paying a monthly 65-cent surcharge on their telephone bills for more than two years to finance the 911 service.

Salmond signed an agreement for his department to be set up as a Public Service Answering Point last week.

That agreement will keep county officials from having to appear at an Illinois Commerce Commission hearing next week.

"All we have to do is send copies of the agreement to the ICC and we're in business," said Madison County 911 Coordinator Dave Whipple.

The agreement will be given to a hearing officer who should give the system the go-ahead within 10 to 30 days, Whipple said.

The 911 system is to go on line for all county residents in March. Currently, only Edwardsville and Highland have the service.

Salmond's other complaint was his feeling that 911 was a duplication of services. While this view hasn't entirely changed, it has softened.

"I know there's some people who agree with me," Whipple said. (See 911, Page 8A)

Fierce competition for teaching posts

By Randy Vaughn
Staff writer

Finding a teaching job has become fiercely competitive for new graduates and recent teachers.

"The competition is creating well-qualified candidates, which is good for the quality of education," said Donald Baden, curriculum and instruction chairman at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville's Division of Education.

"I think that's where we're headed. When I talk to districts about the new people they've hired, they're very happy."

Increased competition for jobs has prompted potential teachers to hone skills, particularly in mathematics and science, two fields that school critics say need improvement.

School program expanded

By Randy Vaughn
Staff writer

The federal government will once again finance a supplemental reading and mathematics program for students at five schools in Granite City School District 9 and has also approved expanding the program.

Granite City High School will become a Chapter 1 school next year.

The announcement was made at a Granite City School Board meeting Tuesday night by program director Gary Pirozzini, who said the district had successfully completed a comparability study based on student/staff ratio in the district numbers until 1993.

Five schools in the Granite City School District are funded by the program: Lake Marshall, White and Prairie elementary schools and Coolidge Junior High School.

The program has been available for more than 25 years, and the Granite City school board successfully met the federal standards, Pirozzini said.

"I can remember only one year that we were not in compliance with the federal standards," he said. "If a school district does not meet the standards, it would be required to equalize the student/staff ratio in the Chapter 1 (See PROGRAM, Page 8A)

Primary cited in redistricting ruling

SPRINGFIELD — A timely March primary was the main reason Illinois Supreme Court justices gave for approving a Republican redistricting plan.

Justice Joseph Cunningham, the only Democrat to join the court's three Republicans in upholding the plan, said the court's approval was not based on "overwhelming acceptance," but was based on the best interests of the voters in mind.

The high court did not have the time nor the budget to draw its own map, and any delay would have threatened establishing "proper" election procedures, Cunningham, of Fairview Heights, said.

The court on Tuesday released the formal opinions for the primary order that was announced Monday.

Voting 4 to 3, it accepted a revised map approved by the Republican majority on the Legislative Redistricting Commission, a plan that Democrats said threatens their majorities in both houses of the Illinois Legislature.

"We find it preferable to hold elections on the date already established for state elections," Cunningham wrote for the majority.

Delayed elections, he wrote, "would result in lower voter turnout and place extraordinary expenses on the state at a time when this court takes judicial notice of extreme budgetary constraints."

Cunningham also said the court majority "cannot, in good conscience, order an at-large election."

Cunningham wrote a Dec. 13 opinion rejecting an earlier GOP map and threatening an at-large election if an acceptable plan was not adopted. Legislative candidates would run statewide in an at-large election.

The Republicans won the majority on the redistricting commission in a tie-breaker drawing.

Most of the justices criticized the procedure used when the (See PRIMARY, Page 2A)

Food stamp scam yields prison sentence

By Randy Vaughn
Staff writer

An East St. Louis man was sentenced to 25 months in prison after being charged with illegal cashing food stamps.

Kenneth Jerome Coates, 44, was sentenced Jan. 10 by U.S. District Judge William B. Beck of Granite City. He had been charged with conversion of money and obligations of the United States.

Coates, the owner of a grocery store in East St. Louis, pleaded guilty on Oct. 31 to purchasing food stamps from food stamp recipients for only a portion of their face value and then redeeming them with the Food and Nutrition Service for face value.

Investigation revealed that Coates had redeemed over $1.5 million in food stamps and that he had done less than $400,000 in gross sales over a 17-month period.

"He's probably done more than it appears because his entire inventory wasn't made in his food stamp," said Frederick J. Hess, U.S. attorney for the Southern District of Illinois.

The stamps can only be traded for food products, Hess said, noting that stamps cannot be traded for liquor, tobacco, or some snack foods. A citizen must go to an authorized redemption center for cash trades.

Coates was paying 50 cents for every dollar worth of food stamps, Hess said.

"Investigation revealed that some individuals were trading food stamps for narcotics, and the stamps were being brought in for cash from Coates," Hess said.

The sentence also included serving three years of supervised release and paying $1 million in restitution to the Food and Nutrition Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

About $168,000 worth of Coates' automobile was released by Coates to the Department of Agriculture pursuant to the terms of the plea.

Coates Market was also sold and the proceeds were turned over to the Agriculture Department with an agreement not to contest permanent disqualification from participation in the federal food stamp program.

An officer was dispatched at 10:39 p.m. Jan. 14 in regard to a business alarm. The southern showroom window of Auto East, 1911 Madison Ave., had been broken with a large concrete block thrown through the window. Store officials told police that three speakers valued at a total of over $1,800 were missing.

he had waited for Wolf to step aside before deciding to enter the race.

"Wolf is as good a representative as me, (and) whose votes are usually the same as mine. I couldn't see how the voters would be any better off with me than they would be with him," Flinn said.

Prior to Wolf's announcement, Bruce Cook, a Belleville attorney and Democratic state central committee man, said Wolf could expect opposition in Belleville. Cook said Belleville hadn't had a Democratic representative of its own since Alan Dixon, now a U.S. senator, represented the district more than 20 years ago.

"Since then we've been split between Cahokia and East St. Louis," Cook said. "Maybe it's time Belleville got its representative; it could call its own shots."

Flinn said he agreed with Cook's assessment of the feeling in Belleville.

"Since the majority of the voters in the (new) district are in Belleville, they probably feel the representative should come from Belleville," Flinn said. "Politicians shouldn't be parochial, as they are, and parochial feeling can make things move in a direction they might not otherwise move."

Wolf said the Democrats saw their chances of winning the seat may lose the district "altogether" to a Republican challenger and he believed it was in the party's best interest for him to step down.

"It was not an easy decision, but I know it was the right one," Wolf said. "I could have massaged my ego by running again, but I believe I did a good job done in this case."

Flinn agreed that a "primary fight is not what the Democratic Party needs right now," but said, "I'm not out to prevent anyone from running. Anyone who is qualified for the office is welcome aboard."

Both Cook and Flinn said they expect the Republicans to have a viable candidate for the position in the general election.

Former Belleville Area College board member Elizabeth Jenner has been mentioned as a possible candidate.

"I would say the same to her and anyone else: Anyone who is qualified to run can. At the moment I am the Democratic candidate, I will run a clean campaign and will talk about my experience and qualifications."

"I will not talk about the opposition, I will not criticize or speculate about what kind of representative he or she would make. That is a decision for the voters."

Weber faces opposition

Mount Carmel man seeks GOP nomination

Madison County attorney Don Weber will face opposition in his quest for the Republican nomination for Supreme Court justice for the Fifth Judicial Circuit.

Saying that the focus of his campaign will be judicial reform, downstate attorney John E. Rhine announced that he will seek the Republican nomination for the seat.

Rhine said that the Supreme Court makes the rules of procedure for all the courts of Illinois and that it has the power to change these rules to help cases get through the system quicker and cheaper.

The delay and expense of the legal system affects everyone, not only the parties. There is a sense of justice failing when a criminal case, divorce, or even a small claim takes so much time and money.

"I believe the rules could be changed to make the courts operate cheaper and quicker for the taxpayers and the parties, with no sacrifice of fairness to all involved. The Supreme Court should actively search for such measures to improve the legal system and the administration of justice."

The Fifth District is Illinois' largest geographically, containing 38 counties and covering roughly the southern one-third of the state. Rhine is currently a partner in the law firm of Fowler, Rhine and Edwards, Mount Carmel, in southern Illinois.

He graduated from Southern Illinois University in 1974 and from the University of Illinois College of Law, magna cum laude, in 1977.

He served as clerk to former Supreme Court Justice John J. Unitas and is a former special assistant attorney general.

Currently chairman of the Law Office Economics Section of the Illinois State Bar Association, he has served as a director and officer of Voices for Illinois Children, an advocacy group for children of the state. Rhine is married and has three children.

His opponent in the Republican primary will be Don Weber, a Madison County attorney, former state's attorney and author of a best-selling book on the Heather Sims' murder case.

The Illinois primary is set for March 17.

Vadalabene is named to Gulf War committee

SPRINGFIELD — The names of 14 Illinois servicemen who died during the Gulf War will be inscribed on a memorial now being considered by a legislative committee.

Sen. Sam Vadalabene, D-Edwardsville, has been named to the Persian Gulf War Committee. Vadalabene, a World War II veteran, was one of eight people appointed by Senate President Philip Rock.

He strongly understand the importance of the international commitment to those who have served our country and have sacrificed their lives for our freedom," the senator said.

The committee will help select a design for the memorial, which will be constructed through private donations.

Controversial remap vote

Who says one person can't make a difference? Justice Joseph Cunningham did.

Because he voted with the Republican members of the Illinois Supreme Court, the legislative districts in this state are undergoing some major changes, changes that will give the GOP the power base it hasn't had in the last decade.

Power is the key word here. The map approved by the Supreme Court could give the Republicans the balance of power in the Senate and reduce the Democratic majority in the House.

Take the case of Ron Stephens of Troy, for example. He served as state representative in the 110th Legislative District until Jay Hoffman, a Democrat from Collinsville, defeated him in the last election. Stephens hasn't done that badly for himself: He was appointed to head the state's Emergency and Disaster Services Agency.

But now Cunningham's vote gives Stephens a golden opportunity to return to the House. The Republican remap wets out a new 110th district that severs the Troy area from Hoffman's district. That doesn't mean Stephens will breeze into the House, but it does mean he won't have to face his former opponent, Hoffman.

Hoffman's district now becomes the 112th, which stretches from Edwardsville to Swansea and includes Collinsville, Maryville, Glen Carbon, Hollywood Heights and Fairview Heights.

Long-time legislators Wyvett Young and Monroe Flinn, both Democrats, now find themselves in the same district. Another veteran Democrat, Kenneth Hall of East St. Louis, loses some of his Democratic base.

Rep. Sam Wolf of Granite City finds his new (113th) district extending to a portion of the old 110th. And the new district lines divide the Democratic stronghold in the Granite City area.

The truth is that the Democrats been in the majority in the map writing, the districts would have been changed to give them the largest power base possible. Redistricting, then, amounts to the most political of all actions involving this state and its citizens.

And where does Justice Joseph Cunningham stand in all this?

Some Democrats are calling Cunningham a turncoat for siding with the Republicans. It has even been suggested that it is his revenge against the Democratic establishment for giving its blessing to Moses Harrison's candidacy for the state Supreme Court. Cunningham, who is serving out the term of the late Horace Calvo, would probably have run for the high court seat if the endorsements had been for him.

But what if there really wasn't a hidden agenda in Cunningham's vote?

In this tangled web of politics, isn't it refreshing to think that, just maybe, Cunningham cast his vote for what he thought was a good plan, or at least a workable plan? His vote apparently has eliminated the possibility of an unwieldy statewide at-large legislative election.

Video telephones in our future?

(Carol Clarkin's column appears in the Edwardsville Journal)

There was a time when I never dreamt about beyond recall, when I played it. More accurately, played at golf.

As a lost cause, the Confederacy would have to take a back seat to my game. The best pro, in the world would have thrown up his hands in disgust and walked away after a couple of sessions. I might add, that I did not quit well. One of my fond memories of an afternoon on the links was when the late Ray Hughes, a fine golfer and a great gentleman, drew me as a partner in a mixed doubles game.

At the end of nine holes in which Ray valiantly attempted to get us out of the unthinkable horrors in which I consistently placed us, I apologized to Ray for my inabilities.

From that day, that Ray wasn't dead, Ray responded, "Hey, Carol, that's OK. You've shown me places on this course, I didn't even known existed!"

In spite of my terrible game, I liked playing and spent most weekends and evenings on the course.

I thought it was fun, enjoyed being outdoors and getting a little exercise. But the thing I like best was that there was no way anyone could get me by phone.

Like most kids, I'd enjoyed a case of puppy love with Ma Bell during my adolescence. At maturity, I'd come to know the phone as at best a nice blessing, at worst, a necessary evil.

As the years have passed, I've had no reason to change that assessment. But I have developed enough common sense that I no longer jump from the shower and scurry to the ringing phone, only to learn that someone wants to tell me something about my house or give my credit report.

At least three or four times a week, my evening meal is disrupted by phone calls of this nature, spoiling my meal and causing my blood pressure to soar.

Naturally, the dinner hour (especially on week nights) is considered prime time by these privacy invaders.

Last week, I received two calls from the same phone gypsy — a female named Sue (they never have a last name, sure sign that they're up to no good!) — who wanted to give me a monster grocery bundle.

I didn't talk to Sue long enough, to find out what I had to buy, get the grossed out though I did remind her that it was a second call, I still wasn't interested, and my naivete didn't stretch to believe it was a free lunch.

Sometimes I'm not that polite; the second I hear "Hi! How are you doing this evening? This is Leonard and I wanted to ...," bang goes the phone.

I've considered preparing a brief statement that I never buy anything from phone salespeople, whether it be fertilizer or the Taj Mahal, so please don't call again. But I know it would be an exercise in futility.

Feeling as I do about telephone conversation — and that includes a phone cord, something I expected them to outgrow — I who consider people and not be a show-off word for a free lunch.

Both of my children have what I consider an unhealthy attachment to a phone cord, something I expected them to outgrow — I who consider people and not be a show-off word for a free lunch.

I'm appalled at the proliferation of car phones, things I once believed were only installed in the chauffeur-driven limos of the incredibly wealthy. Now I know better.

I haven't seen state on them yet, but a week doesn't pass that I don't see someone using a car phone in Edwardsville.

Recently, on a trip into town, I encountered two in a row — one a fellow engaged in a lively conversation as with one finger, he guided his car up and around the curves of Tandy Hill; the other, a young woman, casually dressed, engaged in what obviously was an animated social call.

Not only would I like to know how many people have car phones, but I'm curious about how many are involved in accidents.

The icing on the cake came last week, with AT&T's announcement of the VideoPhone 2500 is now on the market for the likes of you and me — or at least anyone who can spend $1,200 for one.

Full-color motion and still images in a home plugs into a standard wall outlet and send pictures and voice over the phone line for the same price as any phone call. In 10 years, AT&T thinks, the technology will be as popular as cordless and cellular phones are at present.

Not with me, they won't! Looks like it's back to the past for me.

Now, where did I put those old clubs? Fore!

Many signs that city is in midst of rebirth

The following was written by Mary K. Evanoff, a former resident of Granite City:

On Dec. 4, 1991, I was invited to return to Granite City, Ill., as the guest of the Illinois Dept. of Economic Development of my beloved "home" town, and Alan Ortibus, economic development director of Granite City.

My visit began with a meeting at the City Hall. What a wonderful surprise awaited me.

The City Hall has been completely renovated. Blues and blue grays dominate the building's exterior. Through the beautiful building has been accentuated by painting it a different shade of blue than the rest of the building. The mayor's office has perfect appointments.

Warmth permeates the graceful old structure. The rotunda is inviting with the old wood gleaming around the open structure.

With almost a century of use, court used to be a sad affair. The courtrooms have all been refurbished with the help of predominantly federal and county funds.

Robertson's Auto Parts has a new $9 million plant on the grounds of the Tri-City Port Dist. Capt. Sun has expanded.

Wal-Mart was courted to come to Granite City. As a result, one of the largest Wal-Marts is scheduled to open in February 1992.

They are very proud of their Public Works director.

Many long-overdue public works projects can now be accomplished with the help of predominantly federal and county funds.

They have now been moved to a brand new building next to the new Fire Department. Both are very impressive.

As you can tell by my dissertation, I am taken on a grand tour of Granite City which I thoroughly enjoyed. To see new life and energy pumped into this wonderful town made very proud.

I could feel pride again and I could see it on the faces of the citizens. So, here we are, returning.

The heart of "my town" was pumping once again.

There is still a lot of work to be accomplished, but it will be.

Inside and outside the boundaries of Granite City, I felt it only fair to inform you of the "resurrection" in progress.

God willing, one day I'll take these limbs and trees back to where my roots are waiting, for a good life ... everlasting!

Area's economic future is at stake

TO THE EDITOR:

Albert Hofeld of Chicago came to town last week to play politics with the economic future of the Metro East area. It helped remind us once again, how important Senator Alan Dixon is to all of us in Illinois.

McDonnell sale (of a 40 percent share), nor does Mr. Hofeld. The difference is Sen. Dixon will not sacrifice the remnants of Southern Illinois' job to rigid ideology, and will continue to press the Administration, as he has done in the past, to change its outmoded policies.

Albert Hofeld, who did not circulate one petition for his candidacy in St. Clair County, came to town to make the choice in the Democratic race for Senate in 1992, frighteningly clear.

The economic future of Madison and St. Clair counties, as well as Southwestern Illinois, is a great supporter in Sen. Dixon and thus our economic future depends in part on the re-election of Alan J. Dixon.

months in a row.

I ended my association with the program this month, with the disappointment of the child and family I was providing care for.

During this time I was in contact with many providers.

The majority of them experienced similar problems.

Perhaps the people in charge should re-examine the rules of eligibility toward providers and their financial needs should also be considered. Quality providers in this area would like to participate if it was financially possible to do so.

Like children? American Nanny Co. may have a career for you

By Nicole Vaughn—
Staff writer

For those who love children, have a good heart in child care and aren't afraid of hard work, the American Nanny Co. may be able to further a career as a nanny.

The American Nanny Co. held an open house Wednesday in Glen Carbon to answer questions, pass out literature and accept applications from prospective nannies interested in the training class.

The first nanny training class is scheduled to begin Feb. 10. Classes meet for two weeks on Monday through Friday with 10 hours of training offered each day. Students will be instructed in child development, home management, CPR, and basic first aid.

"Those who did baby-sitting once or twice at 15 is not what we're looking for. We need people with some background, some experience, since we won't be going from Day One."

"I've already gotten two or three calls from families seeking nannies," McCunney said.

Those who did baby-sitting once or twice at 15 is not what we're looking for. We need people with some background, some experience, since we won't be going from Day One.'

— Doris McCunney
Firm's owner

McUnney was certified through a three-month program by the Child Day Care Association (CDCA) in 1984. That program is no longer offered, she said.

McUnney worked as a nanny for more than two years before quitting from "exhaustion." She said it was hard for her to work the hours she did while her friends went out on weekend nights.

"It was the right job at the wrong time," McCunney said. "I really had work."

McCunney attempted to start her own business more than three years ago when she planned to operate it as an escort service. McCunney quit posed too many problems so this time she opted for a placement agency for nannies.

"We do the training and try to match nannies with the needs of a particular family," McCunney said. "The agency doesn't employ the nannies — they are actually hired by the families."

McCunney said she is aware of one or two other businesses like hers. There are so few that the state has no specific licensing requirements for the industry.

McCunney got assistance from the Small Business Development Center at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, which took her through step-by-step planning and gave her some government contacts.

While it can be hard work, nannying is in demand.

For more information about the American Nanny Co., call McCunney at 451-2571.

State cutbacks could affect some services for the elderly

At least 135 elderly Madison County residents could lose their independence if a state program that helps them with laundry, cooking and other household tasks is cut as proposed by the governor.

The same citizens could lose help from the Illinois Department on Aging's Community Care Program, which helps older persons live in a house or apartment rather than a nursing home.

Statewide, an estimated 11,000 elderly residents would be forced to do without assistance for bathing, doctors' visits, shopping, laundry and other domestic tasks.

Gov. Jim Edgar's plan to cut $97 million that funds the program and other senior services.

To trim the budget, the home-care program would completely halp aid to 11,000 people and reduce hours for another 3,500, Ernst said.

The end result, Ernst said, will be more people entering nursing homes and more residents whose health will decline because they lack daily help with household tasks.

"They will go into the nursing home, where it costs more, and I don't think the nursing homes could afford them," Ernst said.

A 3 percent cut would translate to nearly $8 million of the program's supreme court decision that legalized abortion.

The reception will be held immediately following the vigil at St. John's United Methodist Church, Edwardsville.

Refreshments will be served and information will be made available from the area Pregnancy Crisis Center and Glen-Ed Right to Life.

The church is located adjacent to the courthouse. For further information persons may call Resa Bridges at 288-3068.

Weekend ceremonies to mark abortion ruling

Two ceremonies will be held in the area this weekend to mark the 19th anniversary of the Supreme Court's decision that legalized abortion.

The Metro East Coalition for Choice (MECC) is sponsoring a candlelight ceremony at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the east entrance of the Madison County Courthouse in Edwardsville.

All pro-choice people in the Metro East area are invited to attend and participate in the ceremony by bringing a candle.

MECC's address is P.O. Box 147, Edwardsville.

THE LAW AND YOU

BY RICK REED
Attorney At Law

Sometimes, fathers contact this office and inquire about the possibility of reducing their child support obligation. In some cases, these men were not represented by an attorney at the time of the original decree. They frequently ask me if they merely agreed to a child support without considering what they could afford. Several months later, many fathers in this situation realize they are paying more than other men in similar circumstances. They then inquire about a possible reduction in support.

How does a father know if the amount of child support he agreed to is excessive? Illinois law provides that the Court shall determine the minimum amount of support by using certain guidelines. The purpose of these guidelines is to pay at least 20% of his net income toward child support. Two children will require a minimum of 25% of the supporting party's net income.

It should be noted, however, that just because a support party entered into a bar agreement at the time of the divorce does not necessarily mean that he can subsequently have the amount of support reduced. In order for a supporting party to modify child support, he or she must show a substantial change in circumstances. A father who feels he is paying too much support would have to show that he is making less money or his wife is making substantially more. He also could attempt to show that the needs of the child were not as great as they were previously.

Recently, a man came to this office one year after he was divorced. He indicated that at the time the marriage was dissolved, he never consulted with his own attorney. His former wife convinced him to agree to child support which was 33% higher than the minimum standard provided by the guidelines. He inquired about the possibility of seeking a reduction in child support.

In this particular case, the man was actually making more than he had been at the time of the dissolution of the marriage. His former wife had been making a substantial amount of money, and the needs of the child has actually increased in the intervening year. In this case the prospects of the father obtaining a reduction in child support were very remote. This is a case where there had not been a substantial change in circumstances since the dissolution of marriage.

Juneau design wins engineering award

Juneau Associates Inc. has been informed that its design project entry, "Edwardsville Water System Electrical Improvements," has been selected by the Consulting Engineers Council of Illinois to receive a 1992 Engineering Achievement Award.

The Juneau engineering company is located in Granite City.

The Consulting Engineers' Council will recognize the firm and the City of Edwardsville at the 1992 Illinois Engineering Excellence Awards luncheon, to be held at the Ramada Renaissance Hotel in Springfield on Jan. 31.

The Award is given to recognize both the project owner and engineer for being innovative in the design of a project with unique features using new technology.

The Edwardsville water treatment and distribution electrical system dates back to 1961. Over a span of 40 years, the electrical system had become a scrambled assortment of old equipment and wiring, making operation and maintenance difficult.

The entire electrical wiring and control system at the water treatment plant, two remote booster pump stations, and four remote storage reservoirs was upgraded and wired into a remotely monitored and controlled computer system.

A desktop 386SX personal computer is the heart of the system.

The computer continuously collects and dispatches the operating data over voice-grade telephone lines with the use of modems to programmable logic controllers at each location.

The programmable logic controller (PLC) at each location turns the respective equipment on and off.

actions directed by the Police Department to perform police duties and/or investigations.

The court did not agree that the appearances were based on job-related cases.

Edward Fitzhenry Jr., assistant city attorney, contend in a brief that the arbitrator erred in not permitting evidence challenging the arbitrator's evidence in support of their court time.

Of 50 hours claimed for the two sergeants, eight hours of pay to Rosenberg and four hours of Reader were for a period in which the court was not in session, Fitzhenry alleged.

This is the decision we were looking for," Fitzhenry said.

"It's not truly a dollars-and-cents issue, but the principle of upholding a contract that is important to the city."

The officers have 30 days from the St. 20 decision to appeal the order.

•Mathematics

"I'm more concerned about science and special education," said Walmsley.

He said he is somewhat surprised that there are more applicants for science and special education than for math. Baden said.

Higher numbers of students going into teaching have fueled the job competition.

"The last few years the number of openings have increased, but there have been more balanced by the number of people looking for jobs," Baden said.

"That increase has been more dramatic than the increase of positions."

The number of people receiving teaching certificates in Illinois grew from 17,082 in 1980 to 19,891 in 1991. In 1982 the state issued 14,000 certificates.

The highest number of certificates issued was in 1974, with 30,075.

The swelling numbers have meant a glut of applicants within the Granite City School District. The problem is there are no openings at this time, said Superintendent Gib Walmsley.

"We're getting a great number of applicants, with the majority in elementary positions," he said.

Walmsley said there has been an abundance of applicants in most of the applicants filing with the Venice School District have specialized in history and social studies in college.

Vocational, math and science specialists have been more difficult to find, but finding special education majors has not been a burden.

Rush said there was a time four or five years ago when special education majors were hard to find, but not any more.

"The good people who really are aggressive in their job search do get jobs," Baden said.

The lack of professionals wanting to become teachers is said to be the result of several trends.

With a sluggish economy, many laid-off workers have gone back to school to get teaching certificates, and earlier warnings of teacher shortages made the profession look like a good opportunity.

But current teachers are hanging onto their jobs longer instead of retiring.

"This is a tough time to be looking for a job. But that is not peculiar to teaching," Baden said.

He said potential teachers with science, math or special education certificates do better than those with backgrounds in English, social studies and other liberal arts.

King upset after 3rd straight loss to Hickey

By Rick Frese
Staff writer

St. Charles West's Shawn Hickey acted as if he just won the Class 3A Missouri State wrestling championship. Hickey, with a huge grin, punched the air with his fist, ran and jumped into the air toward his coach, Jim O'Dell.

Meanwhile, Granite City's Ryan King was extremely upset. The third time was not the charm for King and Hickey in the 22nd annual St. Charles Invitational. Hickey won the encounter, 11-5, for the 119-pound title.

Hickey also defeated King at 102 in 1989 and 112 last year in the tournament. Hickey became the eighth wrestler to win St. Charles' invitational individual title in the three years.

"I won this match by four points," said King, now ranked among the top 10 119-pounders in Illinois. "The refs blew it. I think the two years he beat me, but not this year. I went down and he didn't do anything wrong. This is ludicrous. This is totally sad."

Entering the match, King (22-1) said he thought if he wrestled Hickey 10 times, each would win five.

"Now I think I'd beat him seven, eight out of 10," King said. "I knew it would be close, but I

Ryan King
... hurt by Missouri rules

what a sore loser usually does. What's he want? The score said 11-5. He had three chances to beat me."

Granite City coach Mike Garland said, "King and his wrestlers are at a disadvantage when they wrestle in Missouri. Unlike in Missouri, in Illinois, wrestlers are allowed to use their legs to maneuver for points. Garland said.

"And we like to use our legs," Garland said. "It takes us out of our game. With the rule change, we had to use a different strategy."

Hickey (18-0) was in perhaps the tournament's toughest weight class. Until the tournament, he was 10-0 at 119. He recorded 11 pins among his 18 victories this season.

"I prepared for the tournament all week long," Hickey said. "I knew what to expect. I felt like I was mentally prepared. I tested my endurance. I was winded, but I wasn't drained. I felt confident about my shape."

Hickey trailed King twice during the match, the first time Hickey had to come from behind in a match this season.

"I was frustrated," Hickey said. "I didn't feel like I was given up three points in the first period (and trailed, 3-2). I was real frustrated, but I stayed focused. I never got out of the match."

Hickey trailed 5-3, but with 50 seconds left in the third period, Hickey recorded a two-point reversal to tie the score at 5-5. Hickey scored the final six points with two-point near falls, a penalty point for using an illegal hold and a three-point near pin.

"I thought he relaxed and Hickey kept going and caught him," Garland said. "It was a good match. Not the best kid won — this time."

Hickey and King may get a rematch in the Missouri-Illinois All-Star meet after the season.

"In Illinois, I'd like to see him wrestle again," Garland said.

"If it happens, it happens," Hickey said.

"Ryan King's a very good wrestler," O'Dell said. "It would be a good match."

"I think I'd beat him in any other state — except Missouri," King said. "I'll be ready."

ST. LOUIS CELEBS

Michael George Hamilton
Actor, director

Harry Hamm

Michael George Hamilton was born July 31, 1953, in St. Louis. He is the son of Forrest Hamilton of Beaverton, Ore., and Betty Von Hoffman of St. Louis.

A 1971 graduate of Kirkwood High School, Hamilton sang in a church choir in Kirkwood with another Kirkwood native who went on to become a star: Sondra Bakula, star of the popular television series "Quantum Leap."

Hamilton attended Webster University for one year in 1972 then received a full scholarship in theater arts to Southwest Missouri State in Springfield in 1973. While attending Southwest Missouri, Hamilton was the regional director of film and television star John Goodman. Actor-singer Turley Hamilton and Goodman's class in mid-term her sophomore year.

Hamilton transferred to Fontbonne College his senior year where he earned a Bachelor's Degree in Education. His first professional job as an actor came after college in various productions at the Barn Dinner Theater and the Plantation Dinner Theater in St. Louis.

In 1979, Hamilton went to the east coast where he starred in two shows at the Godspeed Opera House in Connecticut. Hamilton then toured in a starring role in the Broadway revival of the musical "Whoopee" (1979-1980). In 1981-1982, Hamilton had a leading role in the national tour of another revival, "Showboat," starring Eddie Bracken and Cleo Lane.

Over the years, Hamilton has also appeared in a number of Muny summer productions in Forest Park, including "On the Town," "Meet Me in St. Louis," "Finian's Rainbow," "Sweet Charity" and "Tora! Tora! Tora!"

Hamilton moved back to St. Louis in 1986 to pursue work in directing and choreography, which lead to his co-founding of the professional musical theater group Stages in 1987. He has been the Artistic Director of Stages since 1987 and is the artistic director of industry sources. Stages is the fastest growing musical theater group in the Midwest. Stages played to 98 percent capacity audiences in 1991. Their productions are staged each summer at the Kiel Auditorium Civic Center in St. Louis.

One Big Problem in Musical Theater Is: "That there are very few stage stars these days. Everybody is either a star of the movies or television. Not that many years ago, Broadway built its own stage legends, like Barbara Cook, Mary Martin and Jerry Orbach. Now there aren't any really big stars who are known primarily for the musical theater."

I went From Acting To Directing: "Because the actor is just a tool of the director or choreographer and I didn't think that was enough for me. I can remember my first big Broadway shows, getting standing ovations and lots of attention and then going back to my dressing room and wondering why it didn't seem like enough."

When He Was My Roommate In College, John Goodman Was: "Primarily interested in playing football. John wasn't really crazy about acting. He dabbled in theater because he really wasn't sure

When I First Met Kathleen Turner: "She was a transfer student so I came up to her in the hall and said, 'Hi, I'm Mike Hamilton. You must be Kathy Turner, the new transfer student.' She looked at me and said with that raspy voice, 'Pardon? It's Kathleen, not Kathy.' " Hamilton had been in a college of being affected. She always seemed to be trying to develop a persona. There was no informality with her. She kind of kept to herself."

Stages Is Successful Because: "I think we're a legitimate summer alternative to the Muny. People come from about a 150-mile radius to see our shows. We're not afraid to do things that are sort of offer a much more intimate appeal than most musical theater that is done in larger buildings. It's caused us to develop a very loyal following who enjoy our work."

Avner kicks off SIUE series

Avner the Eccentric kicks off the Arts and Issues series at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville tonight in the SIUE Communications Building theater.

Avner will perform his one-man comedic Broadway show at 7:30 p.m. The show has been described as a "one-man, three-ring circus on two legs... a clown for the thinking man."

Good, bad films aplenty in post-holiday period

By Harry Hamm
Correspondent

An American Tail: Fievel Goes West

The dull sequel to "An American Tail." Producer Steven Spielberg has dropped the top animation star, the first feature, Fievel Bluth, and provided a bad story and even worse music. A flat, less-than-entertaining work.

Rated PG (language, sex, violence). Running time: 75 minutes. Keller, Northwest Plaza, Regency Square.

Bugsy

Warren Beatty appears as the late mobster Bugsy Siegel in what may be Beatty's finest work in a film career. Director Barry Levinson has created a sumptuous and biographically truthful period piece. (***1/4)

Rated R (violence, language, sex). Running time: 135 minutes. Chesterfield, Eureka, Hall's Ferry, Kenrick, Shady Oak, Ronnie's, St. Charles, St. Clair, Northwest Plaza, Union Station, Regency, Esquire.

Cape Fear

Michael Douglas plays a psychopathic ex-con in a small southern town seeking revenge against an attorney, played by Nick Nolte, who once represented him. Great performances by two of the most stylish screeners formulated by director Martin Scorsese. (****1/2)

Rated R (violence, language, sex). Running time: 105 minutes. Eureka, Hall's Ferry, Keller, Northwest Plaza, Ronnie's, Union Station, Regency, Galleria, St. Clair.

Father of the Bride

Steve Martin headlines a funny but superficial re-make of the popular 1950 film starring Spencer Tracy, Elizabeth Taylor and Joan Bennett. (***)

Rated PG-13 (language, sexual references). Running time: 105 minutes. Eureka, Hall's Ferry, Keller, Northwest Plaza, Ronnie's, Union Station, Regency, Galleria, St. Clair.

Hook

An ambitious effort by Steven Spielberg to tell us all about what happened to Peter Pan once he finally decided to grow up. Visually striking, but a little too long and superficial. You'll remember more about the sets than the movie.

Rated PG. The death of Cuklin's character could be disturbing for small children. Running time: 102 minutes. Chesterfield, Eureka, Hall's Ferry, Kenrick, Mid Rivers, Northwest Plaza, Ronnie's, Union Station, Regency, Esquire.
